COMMUNITY RESOURCE GUIDE: WHAT TO DO WHEN ICE HAS DETAINED YOUR LOVED ONE

LUCE COMMUNITY RESOURCE GUIDE: WHAT TO DO WHEN ICE HAS DETAINED YOUR LOVED ONE

The hours and days after someone you care about is detained by immigration can be very difficult, scary, and confusing. These moments are also very important, and there are things you can do right away to support your detained loved one. This guide will help you take immediate steps to locate your loved one, communicate with them, and support them in finding a lawyer and gathering important documents. While this guide focuses on information for people who were arrested by immigration in Massachusetts, a lot of the information and links are relevant to people detained anywhere in the U.S.

I. FIRST STEPS AFTER YOUR LOVED ONE IS DETAINED BY ICE

1. MAKE SURE THE DETAINED PERSON'S CHILDREN, PETS, AND ANY OTHER DEPENDENTS ARE CARED FOR

If your detained loved one has an emergency or family preparedness plan, follow it. If not, make sure that their children, pets, and any other dependents are cared for by a family member or friend of the detained person whom they know and trust.

2. CONTACT THE DETAINED PERSON'S LAWYER, IF THEY HAVE ONE

If your loved one already has an immigration lawyer, you should let them know as soon as possible that your loved one was detained. If your loved one has pending criminal charges and has a defense lawyer, you should let them know as soon as possible that your loved one was detained.

3. FIND THE DETAINED PERSON'S A-NUMBER (A#)

What is an A#?

- An A# is an identification number issued to a person by Immigration and Customs Enforcement (ICE), Customs and Border Patrol (CBP), or U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS). It typically has 8 or 9 digits.
- If your loved one previously filed an immigration application with USCIS, were picked up by CBP, or had a CBP One appointment, they will likely already have an A# that you can find in their immigration documents. However, if your loved one came to the U.S. on a nonimmigrant visa and overstayed, they may not have one yet.
- If a detained person does not already have an A#, ICE will issue one to them. A person's A# should be listed on any papers they receive from ICE or the immigration court, as well as on their detention facility identification card and/or bracelet.

Why is it important?

- A detained person's A# serves several important purposes. It can be used to locate where they are detained. It can also be used to find out whether they have an upcoming immigration court hearing, and if so, where and when the hearing will take place.

Examples of where you can find someone's A#:

What is an Alien Registration Number and Where Do I Find It?, CitizenPath (last accessed Jul. 15, 2025), https://citizenpath.com/faq/find-alien-registration-number/.

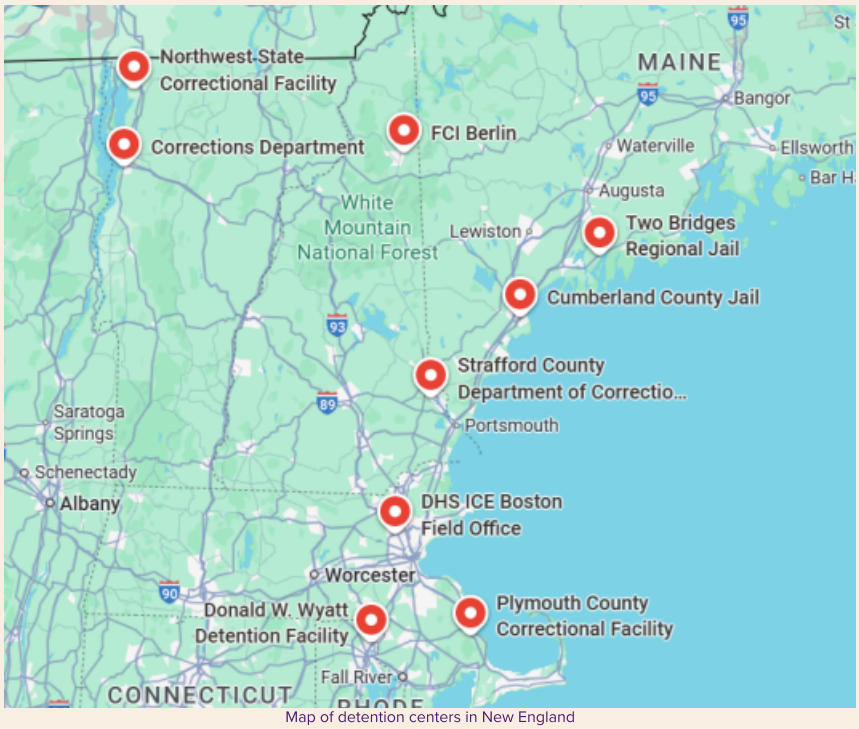
3. FIND WHERE YOUR LOVED ONE IS DETAINED

- To locate your friend/family member after they have been detained by ICE, go to locator.ice.gov. Then search for them by typing in their A# (without any dashes) and country of birth.
  - Most A#s are 9 digits. If your loved one's A# is only 7 or 8 digits, you should add one or two zeros at the start to bring it to 9 digits-- for example, 11111111 would be entered as 011111111
- If you do not know the person's A#, or if they do not have one, you can try using their first and last name, date of birth, and country of birth to locate them within the ICE detention system.
  - Keep in mind that you may need to try different variations or spellings of their name, such as adding a hyphen between two last names, or using only one of their last names. For this reason, it is easiest to search for someone using an A#, if they have one.
- If the person you are looking for appears in the results, you can click on the hyperlinked name of the place where they are detained for more information about that facility and the ICE field office in charge of it.



Map of detention centers in New England

What if my loved one does not appear on the ICE locator?

Many people do not appear on ICE's locator until several days after they were detained. If you cannot find your loved one using the ICE locator, you can try calling area detention centers to see if your loved one may be at one of them. The names, addresses, and contact information of local ICE detention centers can be found on ICE's website, and by clicking on the direct links below:

- Massachusetts
  - Plymouth County Correctional Facility (Plymouth, Massachusetts)
  - ICE ERO Boston Field Office (Burlington, Massachusetts) - the ICE ERO Boston Field Office is not an official detention center, but rather an office building where ICE has been holding some people for hours or days while figuring out which detention center to send them to.
- Maine
  - Cumberland County Jail (Portland, Maine)
  - Two Bridges Regional Jail (Wiscasset, Maine)
- New Hampshire
  - Strafford County Jail (Dover, New Hampshire)
  - Federal Correctional Institution - Berlin (Berlin, New Hampshire)
- Rhode Island
  - Wyatt Detention Facility (Central Falls, Rhode Island)
- Vermont
  - Chittenden Regional Correctional Facility (South Burlington, Vermont)
  - Northwest State Correctional Center (Swanton, Vermont)

Note: only a handful of the detention centers listed above detain women. As far as we know, women may be detained at Cumberland County Jail in Maine, Strafford County Jail in New Hampshire, or Chittenden Regional Correctional Facility in Vermont. Although there are no detention centers in Massachusetts that detain women, some women are held at the ICE Field Office in Burlington, MA before being sent elsewhere.

4. GATHER IMPORTANT INFORMATION

If your loved one does not already have an immigration lawyer, it is a good idea to gather the following information about your detained loved one and have it on hand as you begin seeking legal support on their behalf:

- Full name (and any other names they may have gone by in the past)
- A-number
- Date of birth
- Country where they were born
- Where and when they were detained
- Current address (or city/town of residence, if address unknown)
- Current medical conditions and medications or treatments

HOW CAN I HELP MY LOVED ONE PREPARE TO FIGHT THEIR DEPORTATION CASE?

Not everyone will have viable legal options, depending on their unique situation and history. But, to give your loved one the best chance to fight their case, you can help them by gathering important documents and finding a trusted immigration attorney to consult with as soon as possible.

1. FIND AN IMMIGRATION ATTORNEY

It is best to consult individually with an immigration lawyer as soon as possible after someone is detained. In this guide, you can find legal resources for people who are from or detained in Massachusetts on pages 9-12, and legal resources for people who are from or detained in other New England states on page 14.

2. GATHER IMPORTANT DOCUMENTS

- Immigration-related documents
  - Examples: I-94, notices from the immigration court or the Board of Immigration Appeals (BIA), copies of family members' USCIS applications and their receipts.
  - If your loved remembers being in immigration court or filing an immigration application in the past, but does not have records of these on paper, you can help them file a Freedom of Information Act (FOIA) request with USCIS. To learn more about filing a FOIA request with USCIS, see this guide from USCIS or this guide from the Asian-American Legal Defense and Education Fund (AALDEF)).
- Documentation of interactions with local, state, or federal law enforcement
  - If your loved one has ever faced criminal charges or been arrested by the police-- local, state, or federal-- gather records of this as soon as you can, even if they were not convicted.
    - If your loved one had a criminal defense attorney or public defender, you can start by reaching out to them and asking if they can provide copies of any relevant records.
    - If you know the docket number of their criminal case, you can go directly to the court where their hearings were held and request records of the disposition.
  - If your loved one or one of their immediate family members (minor children or spouse) was the victim of a crime, you should get a copy of the police report.

Remember: if you need to send documents or records to your detained loved one, mail ONLY copies and keep the originals somewhere safe.

A note regarding other documents, including letters of support:

You should prioritize gathering the immigration and criminal history documents listed above because they are important for an lawyer to be able assess your loved one's case. They can also take a long time to get. The more of these important documents you have ready, the easier it will be for an attorney to give your loved one a thorough legal consultation and advise them on what to do next.

It may also be helpful to gather copies of:

- any government-issued identification documents the detained person may have (e.g. driver's license, passport, cedula), as well as their birth certificate.
- evidence of lawful status of immediate family members (spouse, parents, children), such as copies of birth certificates, certificates of naturalization, LPR cards, U.S. passports.

You should wait to speak to an attorney before you gather other documents not listed above, like letters of support, because many cases will not benefit from letters of support. In the event your loved one's case would benefit from letters of support, an attorney can advise you on what to include to make sure they are helpful and relevant for your loved one's case.

II. MASSACHUSETTS LEGAL AND COMMUNITY SUPPORT RESOURCES

Unlike the criminal court system, the immigration court system does not provide a free lawyer if you cannot afford one. Here are some tips for finding a lawyer or accredited representative who can help you:

- Your detained loved one should reach out to more than one organization/lawyer, and should keep calling until they reach someone. It can be difficult to get through to lawyers and legal services organizations by phone, and can take a long time to reach a real human.
- If you can call or email on the detained person's behalf, this may help things move faster. It is okay if you do not speak English fluently, or at all. Most legal services offices contract with language services, and can arrange for interpretation or translation as needed.
- If your detained loved one does not have an immigration lawyer or DOJ Accredited Representative by their first hearing, they should ask the immigration judge for more time to find a lawyer.
- Be careful of fraud or false promises. Notarios, or notaries, are not always lawyers in the United States. Immigration law is complicated, so it is important to look for a lawyer who is experienced in immigration law (ideally with detained cases). Be wary of anyone who promises you a certain result for your loved one's case. Someone who guarantees a result is probably not being honest with you.

BOND AND/OR HABEAS REPRESENTATION

Two Massachusetts-based organizations, PAIR Project and BIJAN, offer free bond and/or habeas representation and support for people who are either detained at Plymouth or Wyatt or are residents of Massachusetts. Bond and habeas are the main ways people in detention can try to get released. If your loved one can get out of detention, it will be much easier for them to fight their deportation case.

PAIR Bond Project:

- If your loved one is detained at Plymouth or Wyatt, no matter what state are from, contact the Political Asylum/Immigration Representation (PAIR) Project. PAIR Project represents detained people in their bond and removal proceedings at no cost. PAIR visits Plymouth at least once a week, but can typically only visit one or two units per week. PAIR visits Wyatt once a month.
  - Detained people can call PAIR at (617) 362-3660. This phone line is open 1pm - 4pm on Mondays and Thursdays, and 9am - 11am on Tuesdays and Fridays.
  - People looking for bond representation on behalf of a detained loved one can fill out this form or email detention@pairproject.org.

BIJAN and Beyond Bond & Legal Defense Fund:

- If your loved one is a Massachusetts resident, and is not detained at Plymouth or Wyatt, contact the Boston Immigration Justice Accompaniment Network (BIJAN)/Beyond Bond.
  - Loved ones of detained people can call BIJAN's family hotline at 617-396-7143
  - Detained people can call BIJAN's detained hotline at 617-637-8195.
- BIJAN/Beyond Bond can also help pay bonds for people who are from Massachusetts or are being detained in Massachusetts. If you need help paying for a loved one's bond, email info@beyondbondboston.org or fill out this form.

SPECIAL CIRCUMSTANCES

Below are some points of contact for individuals of specific communities or identities, or who have been targeted for immigration enforcement in certain ways.

If...	Then...
Your detained loved one is an Asian immigrant residing in Massachusetts	Call the GBLS Asian Outreach Center at 617-603-1809 and leave a message with your name, phone number, and a brief summary of what you need help with. Staff will call back in Cantonese, Mandarin, Vietnamese, or English to set up a phone appointment.
Your detained loved one is an Arab or Muslim immigrant	Call the American-Arab Anti-Discrimination Committee (ADC) Legal Hotline at 844-232-9955
Your detained loved one was arrested despite having a valid visa or green card AND/OR Federal agents used force (broken windows/doors, physical assault, pepper spray) on your loved one during an immigration arrest	Call the ACLU of Massachusetts at 617-482-3170 (Monday - Friday, 9am - 5pm) to speak to a Legal Resources Volunteer, or email legalresources@aclum.org with your name, telephone number, email address and a brief description of the legal problem.
Your detained loved one is a university student in Massachusetts and had their visa revoked as a result of pro-Palestine or similar protected political or free speech activity	Call the NLG-MA intake hotline at 617-433-8353 to be put in touch with lawyers coordinated by Muslim Justice League.

We cannot guarantee that any of the organizations or private lawyers listed will accept cases, and are not responsible for services rendered.

MASSACHUSETTS-BASED PRIVATE (PAID) LAWYERS

Before calling a private lawyer, we recommend reaching out to at least one legal services organization. Try to obtain a legal consultation if they are unable to provide full representation.

Here are some trusted private lawyers recommended within our networks:

- Jennifer Bade - 617-991-9901, jennifer@badelawgroup.com
- Stephanie Marzouk - 617-674-2112, svm@marzouklaw.com
- Eliana Nader - 617-723-0011, enader@magaletta.com
- Stephen Roth - 978-255-3157, contact@stephenrothlaw.com
- David Spitzer - 617-936-3242, david@spitzerimmigrationlaw.com
- Annelise Araujo, Araujo & Fisher, LLC - 617-716-6400
- Tony Drago - 617-357-0400
- Kira Gagarin - 508-455-4241
- Dan Harrington - 617-482-3800
- Matt Maiona, Maiona & Ward - 617-695-2220

For more private immigration lawyer profiles and contact information, you can visit the American Immigration Lawyers Association (AILA) directory. You can always look up a Massachusetts attorney on the Massachusetts Board of Bar Overseer's website to make sure they are a licensed attorney, and to see if complaints have been filed against them in the past. Keep in mind that immigration law is federal, however, so attorneys do not need to be barred in Massachusetts to practice immigration law here.

WHAT IF MY LOVED ONE CANNOT FIND AN ATTORNEY?

People generally do not have the right to a free attorney in deportation proceedings. For this reason, community members are often forced to represent themselves in immigration court. The legal term for representing yourself without a lawyer is "pro se." A person who appears pro se must act as their own lawyer, speaking for themselves in court and preparing their own applications.

If your loved one is unable to find a lawyer, and the immigration judge has told them that they will not have any more time to look for one, there are self-help resources your loved one can use to prepare their case. Below are some resources that we have found helpful:

- Self-Help Manual for Noncitizens Detained by Immigration and Pro Se Asylum Manual by the PAIR Project
- Know Your Rights Toolkit for Detained Community Members by the National Immigrant Justice Center (NIJC)
- Immigration Court Process by Esperanza Immigrants' Rights Project
- How to Know What Type of Case You Have by Immigrant Defense Project (IDP) and Make the Road NY

MASSACHUSETTS-BASED COMMUNITY SUPPORT RESOURCES

Boston Immigration Justice Accompaniment Network (BIJAN)

- BIJAN can:
  - Provide detained people with court accompaniment, commissary donations ($20/mo), pen pals, and letters of support.
  - Provide loved ones with transportation to visit detained people, grants of up to $500 for basic needs in the wake of a detention, and other forms of community-based support.
  - Connect recently released immigrants with sponsors/hosts and other community resources.
  - Send up to $100 for a person being deported to receive on arrival.
  - Connect people impacted by detention with their local LUCE Immigrant Justice Network member organizations and mutual aid hubs for additional support.
- Detained people can call BIJAN's detained hotline at 617-637-8195. Loved ones of detained people can call or text BIJAN's family hotline at 617-396-7143, email bijan.accompaniment@gmail.com, or use BIJAN's Google Form to request support.

IV. NAVIGATING PHONE, MAIL, COMMISSARY, AND VISITATION

I found my loved one. I am working on getting them legal help. How can I support and stay in contact with them?

For more specific information, skip to the page of the facility where your loved one is detained:

1. Plymouth County Correctional Facility (Plymouth, MA)
2. Wyatt Detention Center (Central Falls, RI)
3. Strafford County Corrections (Dover, NH)
4. FCI Berlin (Berlin, NH)
5. Cumberland County Jail (Portland, ME)
6. Two Bridges Regional Jail (Wiscasset, ME)
7. Chittenden Regional Correctional Facility (South Burlington, VT)
8. Northwest State Correctional Center (Swanton, VT)

Information about other ICE detention centers can be found in Freedom for Immigrants' Nationwide ICE Detention Facility Resource Directory.

GENERAL INFORMATION AND ADVICE

COMMISSARY

- Because people in detention are not allowed to carry cash or credit/debit cards, a commissary account is a special funds account where detained people can keep money to purchase things from the canteen (jail store) like food, clothes, and hygiene items, as well as phone minutes in places where phone calls are not free.
- To put money on your loved one's commissary account, you will need their A# and/or the name of the facility where they are detained. Depending on the facility you may be able to deposit funds electronically, by mail with a money order or cashier's check, in person, or via direct deposit.
- Commissary accounts are often closed two days before a person is released, transferred, or deported. If you notice a loved one's commissary account has been closed, this may be an indication that ICE is about to move them. You cannot deposit money once an account is closed.

MAILING LETTERS

- DO NOT MAIL PASSPORTS OR ORIGINAL DOCUMENTS TO YOUR DETAINED LOVED ONE. Always mail a copy. Some detention centers contract with a third-party company to scan and forward a digital copy of all incoming mail, destroying the original document or letter.
- All mail, except confidential legal mail sent by an attorney, is subject to security screening and content restrictions. If the mail you send violates these restrictions, it will be destroyed.
- If you do not feel safe putting your address as the return address on an envelope, you can always ask a local organization if you can use "[your full name] + c/o [local organization's address]" and have someone at that organization send or scan you any mail that arrives back.

MAILING ITEMS

- Depending on the facility, your loved one may need to submit a request for an item before you can send it to them.
- If the request is approved, the facility may have pre-approved or preferred vendors to purchase the item from (like bookshop.org, or Amazon). Be sure to use the preferred vendor and have the vendor ship the item directly to your detained loved one at the facility.
- The item must be the exact same as what was submitted in the request-- for example, if you're trying to send a book, the author's name, book title, and even publisher (depending on facility) must be an exact match.

VISITING

- People who are undocumented should NOT visit detained loved ones. Consult with an attorney if you have questions about whether it is safe for you to visit a detention center.
- To view the visitation policies of the detention where your loved one is being held, click here and navigate to the facility's visitation tab for instructions. Review the visitation tab carefully for rules and restrictions.
- Most detention centers limit the number of people allowed in a visit, and how many visits a detained person may receive per day or week. You will likely need to know the detained person's housing unit to determine which day and time to visit.
- Review dress code rules carefully before visiting the facility, as people have been turned away for violations. Most facilities have dress code rules listed under their visitation tab. A sample of compiled dress code rules can be found here.
- Bring a government-issued ID, such as a driver's license, with you.
- Visitors are subject to security screening. There may be limited space available for visits, so expect to have to wait. You should aim to arrive at least 15 minutes before the visitation window begins.
- Minor children are generally allowed to visit but must be accompanied by an adult guardian (18 years or older) and cannot be left unaccompanied in the waiting room, visiting room or any other area. Children may count towards the limit of persons in a visitation session, so, when in doubt, be sure to review the visitation page for the facility and call to confirm their policies for children.

MEDICAL CARE

- If your loved one is detained at Plymouth and is not receiving proper medical care, you should encourage them to call Prisoners' Legal Services of Massachusetts at 617-482-4124 or to send a letter to 50 Federal Street, 4th Floor, Boston, MA 02110.
- If your loved one is detained outside of Massachusetts, was receiving medical care before they were detained, and has an online patient portal, you can try logging on together and put in a request for their doctor to write a letter summarizing their treatment or medications. You can then send this letter to the warden/superintendent and ICE Field Office overseeing the detention center.
- The Florence Immigration and Refugee Rights Project (FIRRP) has created helpful self-advocacy guides for detained people who need medical care in English and Spanish.
